

Online Training from RiskCheck

A Process That Works For You

Every employer has a legal duty to inform employees of the appropriate hazards in the workplace and provide training. RiskCheck online training provides an effective and cost-effective way to train employees on a wide range of health and safety topics. Online access allows employees to work through modules at their convenience, regardless of location, schedule, or time zone. Upon ordering, users receive unique login codes and access to suites containing the selected courses. On successful completion of a course, users receive a certificate that can easily be stored in electronic or paper files, or printed for framing. Courses are also available for one year, allowing users to revisit all course information at any time as a refresher.

Customized To Suit Your Needs

Successful training makes employees aware of specific risks in their workplaces. Online training courses can easily be modified to suit individual needs, such as highlighting province-specific legislation, industry specific risks and company specific policies and procedures. By using online training, employers are assured that all employees are receiving the same information. We are also able to incorporate interactive elements into courses to ensure that employees understand the material they are given, such as quizzes and prompts for users to supply site-specific information. Most of our courses are offered in English and French.

Reporting Functions Keep You Informed

RiskCheck online training is also an electronic database for storing employee training records. With just a few clicks, employers, managers, and supervisors can easily track employee training progress, find test scores, print completion certificates, check training expiry dates, and much more. We can even set up automatic reminders upcoming certification and automatic renewal.

Take the guesswork out of Health & Safety training
